

The Children's Online Privacy Protection Act (COPPA) requires website operators to obtain verifiable parental permission to collect personal information from children younger than 13.

Personal information includes full name, home or other physical address, online contact information like an email address, telephone number, social security number, a persistent identifier, a photo, video, or audio file containing a child's image or voice, geo-location information sufficient to identify a street name and city or town, and other information about the child or parent that is collected from the child and is combined with one of these identifiers.
